finding our roots.

Roots of one tall oak tree
Stay strong, Oh! I pray thee,
Twist and churn like old books,
in your library called woods.
The plots all thick and juicy.

Our Opening Tree is about transitions. The leaves brighten, change color, fade and fall -- all to begin the process again in a continuous cycle. Like our tree, Wesleyan culture also bears the elements of change academically, spiritually, and socially.

OPENING

finding our roots

The Methodist Church's Founding Father, John Wesley, once said, "Let us unite the long divided -- knowledge and piety." How true those words ring today, in the academic year 2006 -- 2007, with the abundance of progress and renovation on Wesleyan's campus as well as in the Wesleyan spirit!

Wesleyan's horizon is gleeming with new opportunities, but in retrospect, our grounding principles and standards keep us stable and secure, ensuring that the veins of Wesleyan stay strong and everlasting. It's time to take a look at why we're here and how far we've come. It's time to find our roots.

President Pamela Balch '71

"Good to Great!" This has been the theme at WVWC for the past year.

It is through the many varied experiences that Wesleyan students learn to welcome challenges and become either leaders of supporters for each experience they face. It is in the classroom, on the athletic fields or courts, time spent in our supporting offices, in a fraternity, sorority or club, it is having those special chats with a professor, staff, or alumni, it is in serving food to someone less fortunate or doing a project in a third world country, sharing artistic, musical or theatrical talents with others, serving a church, a nursing home, a K-12 community, the business world, the community of Buckhannon and beyond.

West Virginia Wesleyan College must be courageous as it defines its place in the future. We must risk more than others think is safe. We must care more than others think is reasonable and we must expect more than others believe is possible. Our campus knows that it cannot settle for good. We are imagining what it takes to be great and we are charting our journey together to achieve greatness.

I humbly ask all of you for your loyalty, enthusiastic passion, and active participation in our quest to take our imagination to a strong cathedral built on the hopes and dreams of every person who has been touched by its wonder. Now is the time. Our Home Among the Hills deserves all we can do to make it a great institution. Together we WILL make a difference.

-- Excerpts from President Balch's Inaugural Address

Trees have many colors and so do people. On the Wesleyan campus, students and faculty from all races and walks of life can come together and enrich the Wesleyan culture.

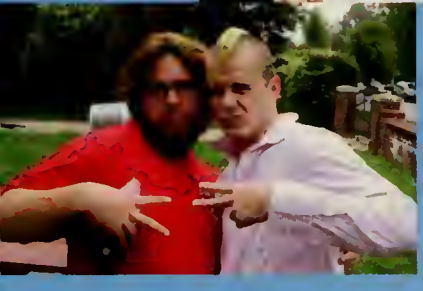
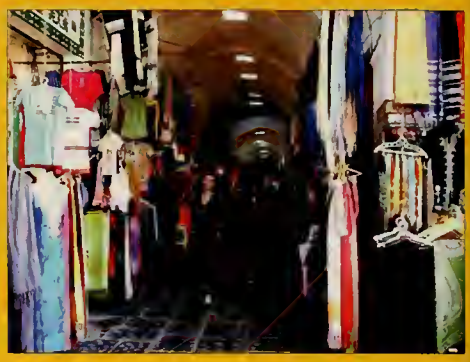
That Old Feeling

Something New



A Taste of TUNISIA

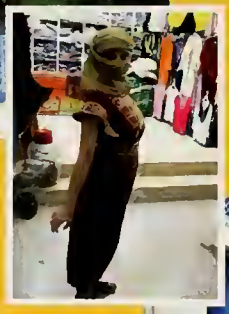


Quotes from Wesleyan Senior Amie Dillon on one of Africa's most gorgeous countries.

"In America, people sell hotdogs in the stands. In Tunisia, they come around with a teapot."

"The Medina is the old city, surrounded by walls. It was Tunis until the nineteenth century. Now you can haggle with shopkeepers selling hookah pipes, rugs, shawls, birdcages, stuffed camels, and the occasional Che Guevara item. He is ubiquitous. "

"The Centre d'Etudes Maghrébines à Tunis, where we studied is a beautiful old Italian villa, taken over by the French during World War II."



On the Tunisian language...

"First there is something akin to the sound made by the letter "h" but which requires some sort of constriction of the throat muscles so that air can just barely squeeze through.

Then there's the one that is something like a "k" but you have to sound like you're hacking something up when you make it. And then there's another that sounds really similar to that one but it's more like you're gargling."

By Amie Dillon, recipient of the U.S. Department of State Critical Language Scholarship

Shakespeare and the City

It was an overcast day when Dr. McNamara's Shakespeare class headed out for Washington D.C. in the fall of 2006, but spirits were high and the atmosphere was light and energetic as I'm sure Shakespeare would have wanted it.

When we arrived at the Harrington Hotel, everyone immediately sought out the local culture. Several went to Macy's, others to the Hard Rock Café, and then there were the bookworms of the crowd, Lauren Roots and myself, who found a little bookstore across the street called Chapters and spent a couple hours rummaging through the latest page turners and finding some old favorites.

In the evening, about five of us piled into a taxi to head for a restaurant that no one seemed to know the location of, including the driver who had only been in America for two weeks. The drive was fun and pleasant as we got to know a little about the driver and we did find the restaurant pretty quickly. After dinner, we walked to the Folger's Theater that is styled in the tradition of the Globe Theater in England and watched a delightful production of Midsummer Night's Dream that was given a 1930's twist.

One of the many things I loved and enjoyed about D.C. was the absolute exhilaration of getting up, going on the metro, taking a taxi, or even walking to where I wanted to go. When I leave D.C., there's a little bit of my heart that I leave behind which is a reminder that someday I'll go back and pick it up again.

Pre-Orientation Trip

In August of 2006, right before classes began, many of the new freshmen travelled on the Pre-Orientation Trip together that included warm campfires, fun games, exhilarating white water, steep mountains, and winding trails.

They were very excited with the trip. They enjoyed rafting, diving, and the campfires. Through communication and collaboration, they became acquainted with each other and started to care for each other. They have become members of WVWC because the community-based Wesleyan culture has been rooted in their hearts, and it will produce plenty of fruits in the future.

ISO BANQUET

On November 11th 2006, forty-four international students from thirteen countries held an evening of international cuisine, fashion, and musical entertainment at West Virginia Wesleyan College. This International Food Festival included food dishes from Albania, England, Japan, Nepal, South Korea, and Vietnam, as well as American cuisine. Wesleyan students also produced a dazzling fashion show with dress that represented their native countries. The event also featured singing, dancing, and other entertainment.

Zach Harmon and Amanda Sluss

The snows began to melt, and flowers came out...
It was a time for the beginning of spring. It was also a time to celebrate Spring Sing! This year, seniors Zach Harmon and Amanda Sluss were crowned as Spring Sing King and Queen. The theme for the hottest weekend was "Music Legend", and 12 organizations competed against each other with their original music numbers for the best prize. Every performance was fantastic, but Alpha Delta Pi won in the Sorority Division, banner, and overall in the competition. Also, Kappa Alpha was top in the Fraternity Division, and International Students Organization (ISO) earned first place in the Individual Division.

Homecoming

On October in 2006, one of the most popular weekends came to WVWC. The students worked hard for this weekend to make all the events a success. The parade was one of the biggest events of Homecoming because many organizations and groups marched while performing their own theme freely, and many citizens came to watch this parade. After the parade, the Homecoming King and Queen were announced to everyone during halftime at the football game. The winners were seniors Jared Weller and Kristen Irvine (above picture). The enjoyable Homecoming weekend was evident with their smiles.

"Doing this show was a life changing experience. I got to get even closer to some of the most amazing people I have ever met. I loved this entire process and everyone involved in it. I learned so much about myself and I could never thank everyone enough."

THEATER

The cast of the bold and brassy Chicago, a musical about two nightclub singers who escape murder charges, kick the class up a notch with its 1930's style costumes.

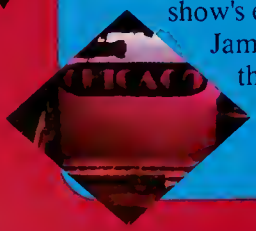
Jamie Watkins, a senior at Wesleyan, has a passion for theater and the arts. In this past spring's Chicago, Jamie was the Props Designer and Mistress. She created some amazing props from the large multicolored fans for the dancers to the period 1930's style cameras that actually flash. She also assisted theater professor Larry Reed in the building process of the show's enormous sign that hung near the center of the stage. Jamie will start two jobs after her graduation-- one at the Hershey Theater in Hershey, Pennsylvania and another on a cruise ship.



Right: Thelma (Shannon Connell) and Roxie (Meredith Gagich) celebrate too soon as they are gunned down by Kitty Katz (Jen Majetic) in Chicago's finale.

Left: "Being a part of The Spitfire Grill has not only helped me develop as a performer but also as a person. The friendships I made during the production have for several reasons changed me for the better. The people I worked with are so incredibly talented, wise and hysterically funny. Their passion for the craft was so inspiring and they were always there to confide in. And thanks to our fabulous costume designer I worked my butt off and she was able to sew it right back on. I would like to say I was a HOT old woman."

The "Food Village" Provides for the Upshur Parish House

The John D. Rockefeller IV Physical Education Center has played host to athletic events, concerts, and displays, but during Homecoming weekend it was transformed into something never before seen – a "Food Village." Visitors to the gymnasium were treated to a replication of all the campus buildings built with non-perishable items that were donated by members of the campus community, alumni, and Buckhannon area residents.

Jeremy Sibold Honored as Exemplary Teacher

Dr. Jeremy Sibold, chairperson of Wesleyan's exercise science department, received the College's Award for Exemplary Teaching from the General Board of Higher Education of the United Methodist Church. The award recognizes the accomplishments of an extraordinary teacher, one whose professional competence, dedication to the growth of students, and commitment to the highest academic standards combine to create a campus environment in which learning flourishes.

Pamela Balch
President of WVWC

Wesleyan goes back on track and marches towards its splendid future

This year, Wesleyan saw many changes under the new leadership of President Balch. How did she manage these changes? What is the future of Wesleyan in her mind? With these questions, we interviewed her on May 9th.

K (Keiko Adachi): When did you start to work as the president?
P (President Balch): July 2006. It is almost one year.

K: What did you do before you came to Wesleyan?
P: I was the president of Mayville State University, North Dakota.

K: Why did you decide to come here?
P: I had taught here for 10 years. I graduated from Wesleyan in 1971. I was a faculty member from 1978 to 1988 before I moved to California, where I went through the ranks, promotion, tenure, and moved to the administrative level. When this opportunity came up, I wasn't looking for another presidency since I had only been the president for three years. But this looked like a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity where I could come back and really serve my own institution. This is my third time as student, faculty, and president.

K: How did you prioritize your job?
P: It is definitely balancing. When I came in, I noticed the morale was really low and something we needed to work on. It was my first priority to get people and community to feel that there is a lot of hope, enthusiasm, and inspiration. We started to send students and faculty birthday cards to make them feel special.

There are also financial challenges, enrollment challenges, and building maintenance challenges which had been problems for long, long term. We have to figure out to what to do and how to fix them.

Another concern is when I walked in the door, we had the Chief Financial Vice President and Advancement Vice President positions unfilled. Those are huge positions that I have to oversee. To balance external and internal needs, I probably spend 60% of my time off campus, fundraising, and meeting with alumni.

We started a fundraising program which is very successful and brought the gap from $6.5 million down to $2 million. We also started our strategic planning processes.

K: How do you plan to reduce costs?
P: We are actively building revenue, generating programs first. That's why we brought back the Nursing Program. We also restructured some of the departments and curriculums. We are not planning to lay off people which I call the "slash and burn" model.

K: How do you get close to faculty and staff here?
P: I had been a professor for ten years. Most of people I worked with are still here. When I went for the interview in Pittsburgh, I knew half of the people on the search committee. I knew half of the people here as friends when I arrived. For those whom I didn't know, I set up sessions with them or had breakfast with them to get know them.

K: What is your vision for Wesleyan?
P: I'd say strong enrollment, stabilized at 1500 to 2000, and a service-based community. We will provide some experience to the students, such as church experience, business school experience, community serving experience, and research experience. We'd also like to expand our foreign language programs, our graduate education, and add more master programs.

K: What do you like to do in your spare time?
P: Travel. We have been to 60 countries. Last Christmas, we went to Bhutan. I like music too, all kinds of music. I play piano, though I did not have much time last year. Also, I like antiques. My husband and I are collecting them.

~English Department Picnic~

Surrounded by good food, friends, and the awe inspiring power of literary conversation, students and faculty gathered for the English Department Picnic in the fall of 2006. The festivities were held just outside the Annie Pfeiffer Library on the front lawn. Dr. Mark Defoe, English Dept. Chair, became the Master of Ceremonies and started . The evening kicked off with a quiz show in which professors conjured up some pretty tricky literary questions for students to answer. Those who answered correctly received a book of their choice from the prize table.

Listen to Your Voice and Find Your Future

As I face my last semester of classes before student teaching, I'm a bit reluctant to leave the books and professors behind. One of my greatest joys here at Wesleyan has been exploring my English Literature major. Over the past three years, I've been encouraged and welcomed by many of the English Department faculty, and I can say without reserve that the men and women of the Annex are some of the finest and most intelligent I've had the pleasure to study under.

One of my biggest achievements has been discovering what I want to do with my future, and how English fits into that future - I've been able to zero in more concretely on my interests, and I've solidified that college English is what I want to teach. With my professors at Wesleyan (as I'm sure is the case with the professors of all disciplines here), I've always been pushed farther and have been expected to reach higher. It's a pleasant feeling to know that even on an "intellectually bad day" (and we all have them!), my instructors would always respect and acknowledge my contributions. I have yet to find a feeling similar to being an English major here at Wesleyan: I get to read great books every day, I get to discuss them among friends and fellow students, and I get to react to the inspiring and often clever discourses of my professors. This hardly feels like work, to me.

Without a doubt, I'll miss Dr. Creasman and his lively Jane Austen discussions, and I'll remember him fondly as the first professor I met here. Dr. DeFoe, the head of all this wonderful madness, will be kindly remembered as the man who led me (and countless others) down the treacherous path of Senior Thesis. I now more fully appreciate the canon of World Literature with much thanks to Dr. Mallory, though I won't admit to liking Kawabata. Dr. McNamara has truly proven herself a wealth of knowledge - whether it be Shakespeare, Yeats, Woolf, or in writing creatively - I adore her energy and kindness. I'll laugh often remembering all the witty jibes I exchanged with Dr. Saunders in class, and I'm certain I'll wish I could take him to graduate school with me! Dr. Waggoner will always be my authority on the very hip "Crane James and Twain," and will also be remembered as one fabulous half of "The Frets." I will truly be hard-pressed to find a better faculty or a more fulfilling experience wherever life takes me.

When the Opportunity Presents Itself, Just TAKE It!

A few months ago, Dr. Saunders (that venerable and estimable man) approached me outside the Administration building and asked if I would be interested in applying for a Fulbright scholarship, perhaps to teach English in China, or conduct research in another country. I had heard of the award, knew that it was a grant to study abroad independently. I told him that I would think about it and meet with him in a few days, and walked back to my dorm thinking that it was nice to be thought of, but I would never do it.

We have plenty of reasons that we avoid change. I like my life the way it is, I have other plans, better the devil you know. The theory that avoidance of change is rooted in fear is neither new nor doubted. I was hesitant to apply for the scholarship because I feared failure-either not receiving the scholarship or being unable to live for a year in another country where I did not speak the language or know the customs.

The end of this story is not nearly as important as the beginning. I have been offered the most amazing opportunities at Wesleyan and applying for the Fulbright was only one. Three years ago, a friend told me that she needed an assistant editor for the student newspaper. I had spent my entire freshman year avoiding getting involved with the publication; it sounded like a neat thing to do, but I wanted to focus on my academics. Because my friend asked, I agreed. As a senior, I am the editor. Similarly, my freshman CA told me that she thought I would make a good community assistant. I laughed at that, but I have been in Housing for three years and met my best friends through the experience.

Sometimes, I look at where I am and have no idea how I got here. Sometimes, I ask myself, what are you thinking? Who do you think you're fooling? When I was young, people my age were like gods--how were they so confident and put together? I remain amazed by the power of perception, but no longer wonder when I'll reach the place I imagined others to be as a child.

In your life, you are going to be offered opportunities--gorgeous, bursting opportunities that will have the strength to change the direction of your life and the way to see it. You are going to be ridiculously scared and that feeling won't really ever go away. But you have to take these opportunities when they present themselves, because they won't come around again; they are in high demand. Even if they do, you will be far too used to letting them pass by to grab them up in the future. Not everything will be the right decision. If it is not, bow out as gracefully as you can. If it is, embrace it with enthusiasm, and also grace, because it is the only thing we can ask of ourselves, that we do our best to make our lives amazing and that we look good doing it.

WVWC has over 70 organizations. Some of them, such as Murmurmontis, have a history of over 100 years, or they were just created, such as the Network Gaming League. Just like the thick woody trunks of Banyan Tree which, with age, are indistinguishable from the main trunk, the newly founded organizations are indistinguishable from the old ones because they are all deeply rooted in the Wesleyan student culture.

Sigma Alpha Iota

The purpose of SAI is to recruit members who have a sincere interest in music and to uphold the highest standards of music.The first chapter was founded in Ann Arbor MI on June 12, 1903, at the University School of Music. SAI originated as "Hemidemisemiquavers" and was led by current advisor Professor Caroline Dees on May 15, 1971. On October 28, 1972 "Hemidemisemiquavers" became the Zeta Eta Chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota.

In 2007, SAI contained 35 sisters (including the MTs)
- 2 advisors (Caroline Dees and Caitlin Pexrode, Admission)
- The Joyful Noise Choir, a special needs choir, was made possible by a grant from Sigma Alpha Iota Philanthropies, Inc.

Sigma Alpha Iota hosted Province Day in March 2007 to chapters from Carnegie Mellon University, Fairmont State, Penn State, WVU, Clarion, IUP, and Allderson-Broaddus.

In March 2007, President Balch was initiated as a Friend of the Arts!

ΣΑΙ frequently participates in community service activies such as:
Joyful Noise Choir (mainly comprised of Special Olympics Athletes)

The MURMURMONTIS

In 1947 there were 21 members on the editorial staff, 10 members consisting of the business staff, and 9 typists. A grand total of 40 people.

Currently, there are only six members on the Murmurmontis yearbook, but these hard-working, devoted people carry their large burden with a great deal of dignity and quite a bit of fun!

Each meeting is about learning from each other and developing one's perspective. Designing, editing, and photography are difficult skills to master, but the end result is most gratifying. In 2007, Murmurmontis has undergone some fantastic changes: a new home in Agnes Howard Hall, creating the first Wesleyan 4-color yearbook, and selling yearbooks for the first time in Wesleyan history. Murmurmontis is also one of the oldest organizations on campus, over 100 years.

In the future, the Murmurmontis staff looks forward to more changes and many new and exciting things on the horizon.

Organizations

Freshman Katie Bush and junior Terra Turansky enjoy the fruits of broadcasting experience on Wesleyan's campus radio show, C-92 FM.

International Student Organizations include many students from different countries and nationalities, such as: India, China, Japan, Greece, Korea, Nepal– here we see Jorel Shkurti from Albania and Tony Richardson from Great Britain.

Oxfam is a widely known charity organization "dedicated to creating lasting solutions to global poverty, hunger, and social justice." Oxfam is represented here on Wesleyan campus by an expansive number of students and faculty.

Willow tree roots are noted for their toughness, size and tenacity of life. At Wesleyan, fraternities and sororities have this same effect--to inspire, nurture, and create through their contributions to campus culture.

Athletic Training

In addition to keeping the athletes healthy and on the playing field, the 2006-07 academic year was packed full of excitement and highlights for the Athletic Training Department. Honors and awards were received on both the faculty and student sides. To start the year off right, Dr. Jeremy Sibold, Athletic Training Program Director and Chair of the Exercise Science Department, was awarded the College's Award for Exemplary Teaching during the Founder's Day Convocation on October 20th. In January, Drue Stapleton, Instructor of Exercise Science and Associate Athletic Trainer, was selected to present a poster entitled, "Athletic Pubalgia and Adductor Tendon Avulsion Repair in a Collegiate Football Player" at the annual Eastern Athletic Trainer's Association Conference in Boston. At the West Virginia Athletic Trainer's Association annual conference in February, Rae Emrick, Assistant Professor of Exercise Science and ATEP Coordinator of Clinical Education was awarded the 2007 Athletic Training Educator of the Year Award.

Athletic training students from Wesleyan were also highly recognized at the West Virginia Athletic Trainer's Association annual conference. Amy Bullock, Michaela Nicas, Shuntaro Shiozaki, and Jodi Webb placed first in the state-wide public relations competition. Dustin Jones, Matt Shifflett, and Shiozaki finished second in the student poster competition. In addition, Ashley Arnott placed second in the oral presentation, while Drew Lotocki finished third.

Cheerleading

When fans entered West Virginia Wesleyan's Rockefeller Center this winter, they heard new sounds coming from within its hallowed halls. The referees still blew their whistles, the shoes still squeaked on the gym floor, and the crowd still roared in anticipation of another Bobcat win, but this season visitors heard the sounds of the sis, boom, bah from the new cheerleading squad.

The cheerleading team had been dormant following the 2002-03 season, but a group of eager and energetic Wesleyan students worked relentlessly this fall and organized a new squad.

The squad practiced three to four times a week in preparation for their upcoming games. They began cheering at the home basketball games this year after making their unofficial debut at the final home football game between Wesleyan and Glenville State.

What started out as an idea from four students on the tumbling mats turned into a wonderful benefit for the College. Cheerleading brought spirit to athletic events, provided opportunities for students interested in this activity, and assisted the admission staff in recruiting.

Our closing tree is at rest. It is hibernating for the next bushels of green on its woody spines. Here is when the tree shows its strength, its hardiness. The closing tree reminds us what makes those green leaves and why they are there. Like the tree, Wesleyan holds up its students, its faculty and its community in the roots which are its principles.

Closing

finding our roots

Whatever the course we tread, the path is always sure to be bumpy and long. However, it's the end of the path that we should focus on. With Wesleyan's future shifting, the sure way to go is forward.

Also, sometimes it's good to stop and rest--maybe beside a tree. Notice its large and small root systems, its firm placement in the world around it. If we focus on what keeps us stable and secure, then what is uncertain will not seem so distant. If we find our roots, we will have the determination and courage to go forward.

Volume 96 of West Virginia Wesleyan College's Murmurmontis was printed by Taylor Publishing Company in Dallas, Texas using Elite Vision 5.1 for Windows XP. The 400 copies of the 8-1/2x11 yearbook contain 136 pages printed on 100# enamel. The cover designed by Seth Kitzmiller is four-color lithocote lamination. The endsheets are Blue Parchment. The entire book is printed in four-color. Most portrait and group photos were taken by Dave and Bob Mihalko of Contemporary Studios in Medina, Ohio. The 2007 theme "Finding our roots" was created by the 2007 Murmurmontis Board. Dr. Bill Mahoney and staff photographers provided the majority of the candids. Additional photos were contributed by Carrie Greenberg, Rae Emrick, Greg Mach and Nate Beardsley. Thank you Mary Elliott, Rochelle Long and Duane Carpenter of Marketing and Communication Office. Thanks to workstudy students Ryo Machida and Takeshi Iwasaki for preparing yearbooks to ship to graduates. Digital pictures were used from the college website, several departmental websites and the Office of College Relations. Thanks to Tracy Wise, Kathryn McConnell and Amie Dillon who provided their stories. Thanks to Record Delta that provided sports photos. Many thanks to Admission Office staff and Academic and Career Center staff who provided detailed information. Special thanks to Doug and Margaret Richardson, Taylor Representatives.
